Task 1 Reading. Read the text and for each question choose the correct answer: A, B or C. 10 points 2 per answer

In recent years, the way people manage their money has changed a lot. More people are using smartphones and computers to handle their finances instead of going to a bank. Online banking and digital wallets allow users to check their balance, pay bills, and even send money to friends in just a few seconds. This means less waiting in line and more control over personal finances.

However, not everyone finds it easy to use digital finance tools. Older generations, for example, may struggle with new technology and worry about making mistakes. There are also concerns about safety. Although banks and apps try to protect personal information, hackers still find ways to steal data. Because of this, some people still prefer using cash or visiting the bank in person.

Despite the challenges, digital finance continues to grow. Many companies now accept only card or mobile payments, especially in big cities. Schools and governments are also offering courses to help people understand how to use online financial tools safely. As technology becomes more common, it seems that digital finance will become a normal part of everyday life for most people.

1. What is one reason people like using digital finance tools?
   - A. They are very easy to use for people of any age.
   - B. They are faster and more convenient.
   - C. They are safer than all other methods.

2. Why might some older people avoid digital finance?
   - A. They don't think it is good for their health.
   - B. They don't have any bank accounts.
   - C. They find it difficult to use modern technology.

   - A. It is not a concern anymore.
   - B. It can still be a problem sometimes.
   - C. It is only a problem for old people.

4. What is one thing being done to help people use digital finance?
   - A. There won't be any banks anymore.
   - B. Companies are giving out smartphones.
   - C. Courses are being offered to teach people.
