Task 1: Read the text. Choose the correct answer A, B or C: (10 points)

Dear, Ms. Hopkins

I understand that mistakes can happen and that even the best airline has occasionally lost luggage. But I also believe that passengers should receive fair compensations for their losses.

On August 11, On Flight 3131 from Washington D. C. to St. Louis and Flight 1313 from St. Louis to Seattle, the large green suitcase that I checked with your airline was lost. I filed the appropriate lost baggage report at the Air International Lines office of the Seattle airport right away. Unfortunately, you have been unable to find the missing luggage. Two weeks later I received a lost baggage claim form in the mail. I immediately filled out the form with the exact value of all lost items ($857 total).

You have sent me a check for $375 to cover the loss. I realize that passengers sometimes exaggerate the cash value of their lost luggage and its contents, but that is not the case here. Many of the lost items were new, and I have enclosed copies of my sales receipts for them. There were supposed to be gifts to my nieces. I no longer have the original receipts of the used items, of course, but I have given you accurate descriptions of the major ones and approximate date of purchase so that you could check on their retail value if you wish.

Your offer to settle for $375 is unacceptable compensation. Not only have I lost items worth considerably more than that, but this unfortunate incident has also cost me a lot of time and trouble. I will expect a check for the total value or at least the legal limit of your company's liability within two weeks. I hope that we can settle this matter quickly and simply, so that we can avoid further action.

Sincerely,

Albert Atkinson
